ATLANTA FOODIES CAN GET THEIR FILL WITH NEW DINING BLOG Introducing OmnivoreATL.com, Creative Loafing's newest addition to blog family

ATLANTA — We've all got to eat. So when it comes to consuming honest, thoughtful information about Atlanta's dining scene, foodies can count on Creative Loafing's newest blog, OmnivoreATL.com, to deliver quality preparation, comforting content, and a big helping of fun. The blog launched Monday, May 14.

OminvoreATL.com features contributions by CL's food editor, Besha Rodell, along with longtime food writer and Grazing columnist Cliff Bostock. The blog's mission is to discuss food, restaurants and life, and the intersection of food and culture. It will be updated daily, with posts that include local and national restaurant news, musings on the Atlanta dining scene and the role that food plays in our lives. Honesty and thoughtfulness guide each post.

"Cliff and I both enjoy doing the restaurant reviews that appear in the paper, but both of us have so much more to say," Rodell said. "This space will be a place where we can really explore restaurants and how food intersects with our lives in ways we haven't been able to do before. We're excited to join the fantastic community of bloggers in Atlanta."

"Our audience is going to enjoy reading Besha Rodell and Cliff Bostock more often than just once a week," said CL Editor Ken Edelstein. "And the blog format also gives that audience a chance to get a conversation going in both directions about food in Atlanta."

OmnivoreATL.com is meant to complement CL's Food & Drink section, and comments from readers and other bloggers are encouraged. In this way, CL hopes to form a community from the thousands of readers who visit the Food & Drink section and the Good Eats restaurant database each week.

Along with CLFreshLoaf.com and CLBadHabits.com, OminvoreATL.com is the latest addition to Creative Loafing's growing family of blogs. You can view all of the blogs, as well as CL's 2006 Food Issue – a James Beard Award finalist – at atlanta.creativeloafing.com.
